President's Note

Greetings and welcome to the winter 1997 KACA newsletter. As I reported in the last issue, we are currently involved in a significant stage of deciding Seoul as the site for 2002 ICA.

Since the last issue, we had several meetings with past, present, elected ICA presidents, ICA administrators and KSJCS (Korean Society for Journalism and Communication Studies) officers. On February 1, Officers of KACA and KSJCS had a series of meetings in Chicago to prepare a proposal.

We have already completed a travel guide and brochure. They will be included with a final draft of proposal. ICA executive committee will vote on 2002 ICA site at Montreal convention.

Members of 2002 ICA Preparation Committees Appointed

KACA and KSJCS have appointed separate ad hoc committees for the event. Two committees will work together on strategies and plans in the future. Members for both committees are:

KACA

Jong G. Kang (Chair, Illinois)
Woonho Kang (Missouri-Columbia)
Jaewon Lee (Cleveland State)
Jin K. Kim (SUNY-Plattsburg)
Kyuhoo Youn (Arizona State)
Kyu Yoon (Washington State)
Gwangsub Han (Hoseon)
Seonghyang Lee (Appalachian)
Eungsun Min (Rhode Island)

KSJCS

Youngsuk Kim (Chair, Yonsei)
Iswahm Oh (Hanyang)
Kyoungja Lee (Kyunghee)
Jeonge Kim (Korean Foreign Studies)
Taeil Kang (Korea)
Janghwook Lee (Chonbuk)
Hyundoo Kang (Seoul National)
Youngseum Lee (Pusan Institute)
Wochyun Won (Korea)

KACA and KSJCS have already completed travel brochure and representatives from both sides had a series of meeting (Chicago) to finalize the proposal in February 1-2.

We have no information on how many Asian nations are interested in the convention, but I have sent letters of requesting support for Seoul ICA to all Asian countries. We are doing everything to accommodate the 2002 convention.

Next, as I mentioned in the last issue, KACA is still striving to reach the 300-member plateau. Your continued cooperation and help in recruiting is greatly appreciated. We would like to include many members as possible in various upcoming events and projects.

Best of luck to you in all your academic endeavors!

Jong G. Kang
President
Illinois State University

Surfing KACA!

Internet Home Page

Joohoan Kim (Penn) and Jongyong Yoon (Stanford) have constructed our home page. The page contains our history and other information. It will be updated whenever useful news and information are available.

It will keep posting updated informations on positions, grants, calls for papers, etc. As you know our newsletter is published two times a year. The home page should compensate the shortcomings of the newsletter.

To access our home page, you must know how to run any Internet browser program, such as Netscape. Once you are in one of browsers, point it to KACA's URL (Uniform Resource Locator): http://192.133.12.49/emin/kaca (all low cases) (No spaces between codes).

Due to the required monthly fee for maintaining the page, the editor will assume the responsibility of keeping and cleaning the page. This means the address will be changed whenever new executive committee is formed. We welcome any information and comments for the page.

Nominations for 1997 KACA Elections

Send your nominations for elective office (president, vice president, secretary) to the Nominating Committee headed by Kyuho Youn (Arizona State) by July 1, 1997. Candidates will be voted at the Korean session of AEJMC (Chicago, July 31-Aug 2). Any KACA members can nominate any other KACA members.

KACA became an Affiliate of Speech Communication Association (SCA) & KSJCS

During 1996 SCA Legislative Council meeting, SCA approved KACA as one of its affiliates. Now KACA is able to function as one of its divisions. We can now accept and review papers and have up to three different sessions. We are also affiliated with KSJCS. ICA & AEJMC are also considering KACA with similar status.
Korean & Black Americans: A Case of Communication Breakdown

We (Koreans) come here, put up our businesses, make some money, pay our taxes. That's how blacks and Hispanics get food stamps, welfare, the whole thing. We're doing our part. - a Korean merchant after the L.A. riot

Pay respect to the black folk, or we'll burn your store right down to a crisp, and then we'll see ya because you can't turn the ghetto into Black Korea. - Ice Cube's Black Korea

Major cities have been the sites of numerous recent conflicts between Korean shopkeepers and black customers. The economic pressures of South-Central Los Angeles, for example, put two subordinate racial groups - Blacks and Koreans - into conflict with each other. In this conflict race and class interests are inseparable, but this is complicated further by nativism - the clash between native-born African Americans and immigrant Koreans. The media portray the Koreans as economic exploiters, profiteering from the poverty of African Americans. An AME church minister in Philadelphia condemned the Korean merchants as "blood suckers" in one of radio talk shows. Harlem residents protested against the Korean merchants' economic racism in the area. A seven years-old boy was shot on the back when he ran away with a bag of potato chip in Columbus Ohio. The bullet hit the store floor first and then the boy. Four black youths ambushed under a Korean liquor store owner's van and mugged him and robbed the day's proceeds in Chicago. According to the office of Korean Association of Los Angeles, 48 Koreans have been killed by Blacks between 1975 and 1995, and 15 killed by Koreans in L. A. area alone. It was Soon-Ja Du's case, however, that heightened the tension between Blacks and Koreans. The security camera in Du's grocery store showed Lashara Harlin approaching the store counter. Du appeared to shout at Harlin and grabbed her sweater. Harlin punched Du three times about the head. Du threw a stool at Harlin. Harlin put the bottle on the counter, and walked away. Du pulled a gun from beneath the counter and fired. Du was released on probation with four hundred hours of community service and $500.00 fine. She was freed because Du's family had been victimized and terrorized repeatedly by black gang members. The shooting was provoked by Harlin, according to Judge Karlin. Like Rodney King's video, the video of Harlin's death is significant because it condensed into a moment of hypervisibility long and complex histories. The transaction across Du's counter - shouting arguments, punching, throwing, a shot - was a material instance of larger historical and social transactions. In it we can trace multiple movements across this counter: the suspicious gaze of the camera on Blacks, money, commodities, self-defense, disrespect, humiliation, and interracial behavior. After the L.A. riot, several attempts have been made to ease the tension (e.g. Black-Korean Alliance), but the racial anxiety and antagonism are activated every day across the counters of Korean-owned stores around the major cities. The tragedy of the relations began when two cultures encountered without having a sense of communion or a mutual understanding of each other. In other words, the tragic relation is the product of severe communication and cultural gaps. According to Freer (1994), it is also a result of restrained and limited interactions, very unusual even in any intercultural relations. Korean American children's interactions with any Afro-Americans are very limited, for example. Afro-American children from the areas where Koreans conducting their businesses encounter with Korean American children under strict business atmospheres. They seldom attend same schools. Only Afro-American children they encounter as fellow students are from different areas. During my pilot field observation, without an apparent reason, the store owner warned his teenage son not to talk to black customers while he attended the cashier. Korean parents tend to be protective of their children. Very few Korean-American children attend racially mixed schools in any major cities. Children (12 to 18) of Korean merchants often help their parents on Saturdays and Sundays and those days are only contacts with Afro-Americans for most of those children. Just like their parents, the problem in the relations between African Americans and Korean Americans is that there is little or no real human relations between them. Their relations or interactions are largely unknown and hidden. They may develop their own systems of negativism and prejudice. Or they may challenge their parents' negative attitudes toward each other. This hidden and minimal interactions require a systematic multidisciplinary effort to understand and produce knowledge that is useful to develop the positive relations. It is impossible to identify the nature of the relations between African Americans and Korean Americans without examining the communicative relations between two culture in general. Obviously, not all Korean-Americans are merchants in Afro-American communities. But their encounters and experiences with Afro-Americans are disseminated through churches and social gatherings, and they become sources of stereotypical knowledge and information among Korean-Americans. My pilot study shows that Korean merchants have these biased opinions and attitudes: (1) African Americans are aggressive and violent; (2) Most of them are welfare recipients; (3) Many of them are drug addicts and alcoholics; (4) Family value and work ethics are lacking among African Americans. The roots of these prejudicial opinions are not only in their confrontational relations with African Americans, but in previous stereotypical informations before they come to this country. Many private immigration agencies in Korea educate prospect immigrants how to deal with Afro-Americans' behaviors. On the other hand, African Americans typical attitudes toward Korean Americans are mostly resentments and angers: (1) Korean Americans are exercising economic racism against African Americans by pricing unfairly; (2) "Korean Americans are plain rude" and disrespectful; (3) They never reinvest money in black community; (4) Korean do not know what it is like to be oppressed. Although the relation between African Americans and Korean Americans has been improved in Southern California since the riot, those die-hard prejudices and negative attitudes are still pervasive among Afro-American and Korean-American communities.

As an annual session for AEJMC, KACA sponsored a session, "Mass Communication and Development in Korea." Several distinguished scholars presented and shared their views on new development of Korean media, including advertising. Jong Kang of Illinois State and Kyuho Youn of Arizona State served as moderator and discussant respectively.

Panels
Taiksup Auh (Korea Univ.) "Political Turmoil: Voter's Polls of the 1996 General Election in Korea"
Kak Yoon (Washington State) & Wonyong Kim (Sungkyunkwan) "Advertising attitudes held by Koreans and Americans"
Haejung Paik (Univ. of Oklahoma) "Korea as viewed by U.S. and U.K. press"
Chulsoo Moon (Korean Press Institute) "Perceptions of political symbols in the mass media: a study on how Korean college students perceive their media-delivered political symbols"

Dinner Reception and More....
Some 25 faculty and students enjoyed Korean style BBQ buffet during the annual convention dinner at Korean House. Speeches and photo sessions were followed. As in Chicago ICA, several younger faculty and students also enjoyed usual Norae Bang party.

AEJMC was smaller and cozier than ICA. Members were relaxed and ready for good times. Interactions among members were more personal and pleasant. Some even suggested "non-academic/alcohol free" activities like golf, tennis, and sightseeings. Well, we are planning those goodies for this year's AEJMC (Chicago). Look for the next issue of the newsletter! KACA would like to thank professor Hochang Shin of Jeonbuk National for his friendship and contribution to KACA during his visiting professorship at Maryland. Noraebang party could have been dry and stiff without his good party spirit, for example. We also thank to professor Taiksup Auh of Korea University for his generosity. The followings are paper presentations and others by our members

And there was SCA......

1996 annual Speech Communication Association conference was held in San Diego (Nov 23-26). SCA is the largest communication association in the world with more than 7,500 members. Among members from Asian countries and Asian-American members, SCA has been their major site for scholarly exchanges. SCA is, however, perceived as less inclusive and innovative organization than ICA and AEJMC. Our members have been absent from the scene because most of our research interests fall into mass communications. Since we have become a division-like affiliate, we encourage you to participate.

During the 1996 convention, we also had a small dinner meeting. The followings are members who presented papers at SCA.

Paper presentations/respondents/chairs

Kyu Y. Chang & R. Buchanen (Pepperdine) "Metrical: A failure to communicate, preliminary P.R. analysis"
Donald Jung (Missouri-St. Louis) "Science, discourse, and higher superstition: Irrational science and rational discourse"

The panel(s) or session(s) will be announced in the next issue. Since we are allowed to have two or three sessions every year, we encourage you to submit papers to the secretary. This year, however, may have only one session because there was no announcement at the end of 1996 SCA program. We will submit a copy of the announcement and will be apparent at the end of 1997 program.

Calls

Extended! - Inviting Book Chapters on Socio-economic Conflicts between African and Korean Americans (Garland). This proposed project seeks papers on any aspects of the relationship between two races: communication gap between two; media images of two; any negative or positive intercultural relations. Both theoretical & empirical studies will be considered.

Editors are Molefi Assante (1996 SCA Keynote Speaker) of Temple University and Eunjun Min of RIC. Send three copies to your editor. Deadline: April 15, 1997.

KACA sessions of ICA/ AEJMC/ SCA invites papers on any related communication studies. Contact the secretary for ICA (Sep-Oct), AEJMC (January) papers and SCA (February). Contact them about one or two months prior to their official deadlines.

KACA Newsletter invites any essays on almost any topics to brighten its pages.

Journal of Applied Communication seeks manuscripts on communication and social justice research. Must be a empirical case study that examine how the norms, practices, relations and structures that produce and reproduce inequality and injustice. Send five copies by July 15, 1997. APA style. Larry Frey, Dept' of Comm, Loyola U., Chicago, IL 60626. 773-508-3733.

The Social Science Research Council provides grants for advanced research projects and research activities on Korean Studies. Call 212-661-0280 for more information.
Trends in Communication Faculty Searches

Communication departments in Korea announced and filled more than 20 positions this year, although few of those announced positions were cancelled or delayed. The number certainly reflects the popularity of communication majors among college prospectives as well as the discipline's restructuring for the better future. It also underscores the ever increasing importance of media and visual literacy in Korean society.

Meanwhile, more and more schools look for professionally trained candidates in the States. There are more practically oriented positions like public relations, multimedia technology, organizational comm, and news writing than theoretical positions. Obviously both countries are experiencing sweeping transitions

Grants and Awards

Jong G. Kang of Illinois State received ISU's research grant of $4,000 to study on Native American adolescents and TV viewing.

Eungjun Min of Rhode Island received the sum of $1,400 for ongoing research on socio-economic conflicts between African/Korean American from Faculty Research Committee.

Internet Porno in Public Library?

Children have a new and unlikely source for getting their hands on the pages of a Playboy magazine: the public library. On Internet computers in local libraries, children who know their way around the Web can gaze at pictures of nude models without their parents' supervision. The possibility that children will see pornography has led librarians to limit, and in some cases, censor, their materials. American Library Association, however, strongly opposes any moves to censor the Internet so far.

Second Coming of Shakespeare?

Suddenly the nation is swept by the surging interest of Shakespeare. While he is kicked around by curriculum reforms, inspired by multiculturalism in colleges and universities, he is one of the most demanded author in Hollywood and Broadway. Modern and revised versions of Romeo & Juliet, Richard III, Emma and Much Do about Nothing did very well at the box office. Latest film version Hamlet will be shown this spring. Critics call this four-hours film as the best Shakespeare film ever. Jane Austin took the center stage last year with films like Sense and Sensibility.

Controversy on NBC's broadcasting of Schindler's List

Many are debating about the airing of Schindler's List by NBC (Feb 23). The movie, sponsored by Ford and aired without commercial interruption, did not edit "F" word, excessive violence, and nudity. As you may know, "F" word and nudity are not allowed in broadcasting regulated by FCC. Some praise that NBC's decision to air without editing is to show and educate American public how the Nazi inflicted the horrible human tragedy of Holocaust to millions of Jews. Others are simply outraged and offended by those contents.

Finally.......

I would like to thank members who sent information and membership dues. Unfortunately, most members did not send their news... It was special that professor Jin K. Kim sent news about his son's musical achievement. The writing of the next issue will be my last duty as the editor. Please send your news and membership due to me. You never know how those news may lead to something in the future. Have a healthy and happy semester! See you at ICA. EJM
